No. 8

During July and August The Gramophone Shop will be closed on Saturdays.

Hours: Monday through Friday — 10:00 A.M. to 5:30 P.M.

Bach: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor. Fernando Germani (organ). Two 12" imported records, Nos. G-C3866/7; price, $4.00. (Manual only).

The Bach Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, one of the great pieces of musical architecture, receives a magnificent performance by Fernando Germani. Here is a reading which is at once careful and vital. Without resorting to theatrical tricks, Germani offers a performance which is both exciting and musically satisfying. The various contrapuntal voices are always kept clear, and the work builds to a most impressive climax.

Technically, this is one of the finest organ recordings made. Recorded in Westminster Cathedral, London, it possesses just the right degree of resonance to give a fine spatial realism. The tone and balance are excellent throughout, while the surfaces are very quiet.

Beethoven: Die Geschöpfe des Prometheus, Op. 43 — Overture and Ballet Music. Dresden Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Paul van Kempen. Two 12" imported records in set DG-DGS1; price complete with album $6.30. (Manual only).

If not as dynamic as Toscanini's version of the Overture for the ballet, "The Men of Prometheus" (VDM-1098), van Kempen's reading is clear and well wrought. The real rarity in this set, however, is the inclusion of a section from the ballet music, none of which has hitherto been recorded. It is the eighth of the sixteen numbers of the ballet, and is marked, Allegro con brio.

The performance of these two numbers is nicely balanced, although van Kempen might have tightened his reading, to advantage. Both recording and surfaces are fine.

Bridge: Suite for String Orchestra. Boyd Neel String Orchestra conducted by Boyd Neel. Three 12" imported records, Nos. ED-X250/2 price, $6.30. (Manual only).

Frank Bridge, probably the most important of England's romantic composers, is ill represented on records. With the exception of two songs, the present suite is the only important work which has been recorded. The sections of this work are: Prelude; Intermezzo; Nocturne; Finale.

The performance by the Boyd Neel String Orchestra is sensitive and nicely proportioned, and although the recording was made a few years ago, it is very good.

Durante: Concerto in G minor (Arr. Lauldi) (3 sides) & Porpora: Fanfara Regale (Arr. Lauldi) (1 side). Chamber Orchestra of the Royal Conservatory, San Pietro a Majella, Naples, conducted by A. Lauldi. Two 12" imported records, Nos. G-DBO5354/5; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

Francesco Durante (1684-1755) was a pupil of Alessandro Scarlatti and the teacher of such men as Piccinni, Pergolesi and Paisiello. Greatly esteemed by his contemporaries, he is practically unknown today. Yet his work is highly original in its melodic inspiration and worthy of more frequent hearings. The Concerto in G minor is a soundly constructed work in three movements: Affetuoso — Presto; Largo; Allegro. What the original form of the concerto was is not known, but Lauldi's transcription is very tasteful and thoroughly in keeping with the period of the music.

Niccolò Porpora, whose "Fanfara Regale" is contained on the last side of this set, was a contemporary of Handel and possibly the best singing teacher of his day. The Fanfare is a slight work with a strong Handelian flavor.

The performances of both these works are fine. Except for a slight tendency for shrillness in the upper string section, the recording is excellent; the Italian pressings are good.

Dvořák: Sonatine in G major, Op. 100, for Violin and Piano. Frederick Grinke (violin) and Kendall Taylor (piano). Two 12" imported records, Nos. ED-K1006/7; price, $4.20. (Manual only).

Although of slight stature, Dvořák's G major Sonatine for Violin and Piano makes very pleasant listening. Originally composed for the pleasure of his children, the work is filled with beautiful melodies and appealing harmonic ideas. The four movements are: Allegro risoluto; Larghetto; Scherzo — Molto Vivace; Finale — Allegro. The slow movement has achieved considerable popularity in arrangement by Fritz Kreisler, entitled, "Indian Lament". The performance by Frederick Grinke and Kendall is warm and clear without being sentimental, while the English Decca recording is excellent. This is the only recording available at the present time.

Goossens: Concerto in One Movement, for Oboe and Orchestra. Leon Goossens (oboe) and Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Walter Susskind. Two 12" imported records, Nos. C-DCX-84/5; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

While Eugene Goossens has achieved his greatest reputation as a conductor, he is also the composer of numerous interesting works in various forms. The Oboe Concerto is largely rhapsodic in character, but is bound together by various thematic devices. Instead of opposing the orchestral forces, the oboe emerges in a solo capacity, leading the rest of the orchestra. The idiom is largely chromatic, with slight overtones of Vaughan Williams and Delius.

The composer's brother, Leon Goossens, is probably the foremost oboist of the day. His playing of this work is perfection. The manner in which he handles the amazingly difficult cadenza is a revelation in wood wind virtuosity, while the lyrical passages have the sweetness of tone for which Goossens is noted. The subdued orchestral part is nicely balanced throughout, while the English Columbia recording and surfaces are excellent.

Honegger: Psalme 130—Mimeamaquim & Quatre Chansons pour Voix Grave—Poème de Verlaine & Poème de William Aget, Madeleine Martinetti (contralto) with Orchestra conducted by Arthur Honegger. 12" imported record, No. C-LFX741; $2.62.

Three unusually interesting songs by the contemporary French composer, Arthur Honegger. They are tinged with a slight oriental flavor, but have strength and sincerity as well. All are beautifully performed and nicely recorded.

Lambert: Horoscope — Ballet (Selections) (3 sides) & Liszt-Lambert-Jacob: Apparitions — Ballet — Galop (1 side). Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Constant Lambert. Two 12" imported records, Nos. C-DXI567/8; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

A previous recording (C-DXII196/7 — not in stock at present), issued a few years ago, contained three movements of the suite from Constant Lambert's ballet, "Horoscope". The present recording, contains the remaining two sections: Sarabande for the Followers of Virgo, and Bacchanale. Lambert's style of composition is thoroughly English, with perhaps a little more of a sense of humor than is usually found in the works of his countrymen. At any rate, "Horoscope" should prove refreshing for easy and pleasant summer listening.

Both these numbers, as well as the Galop from the Liszt-Lambert ballet, "Apparitions" are performed with zest and taste by the Philharmonia Orchestra under the direction of the composer. The recording is all that could be desired.

Medtner Society Set III. Seven 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB8900/6; price complete with album $18.34. (Automatic, G-DB9379/85).

Concerto No. I in C minor, Op. 33 (9 sides.) Nicolas Medtner (piano) with Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by George Weldon.

The Ravens, Op. 52, No. 2 & Serenade, Op. 28, No. 2 (1 side). Oda Slobodskaya (soprano, in Russian) and Nicolas Medtner (piano).

Canzona Matinata, Op. 39, No. 4 (1 side). Nicolas Medtner (piano).

Sonata Tragica, Op. 39, No. 5 (3 sides). Nicolas Medtner (piano).

Medtner's First Piano Concerto is a rhapsodic work in one large movement. In comparing it with the later concerti, it might be noted that there are a few more indications of the influence of Liszt and Rachmaninoff than are to be found in the later essays in this form, but it is by no means an immature work. In spite of its one movement form there are three main sections which are bound together by various thematic devices: a rather brisk Allegro; a lovely andante section, marked, Tranquillo meditamente; and a concluding section marked Allegro molto. In this work, the piano is treated as a more independent solo instrument than in Medtner's later concerti.

The two songs, based on poems by Pushkin and Feth, are particularly fine. Both are strongly imbued with qualities of the Russian folk song, and are well sung by Oda Slobodskaya. The two piano works are from a group of eighteen pieces entitled, "Forgotten Themes". The first is light in character and somewhat Chopinesque in treatment, while the second, a one movement sonata, is more characteristic of Medtner's piano style.

As with the two previous volumes, the performances are authoritative and the recording, excellent.

Mozart: Divertimento No. 2 in D major, K. 131 & Divertimento No. 15 in B flat major, K. 287 — Menuetto and Trio. Royal Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham. Three 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB6649/51; price, $7.86. (Automatic, G-DB9354/6).

There is Mozart magic in this early, unpretentious Divertimento. The writing is pure crystal, and the performance by Sir Thomas Beecham and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra is particularly graceful and well balanced. For some reason, Beecham has seen fit to omit the first Menuetto entirely, and include the Menuetto and Trio from the Divertimento No. 15, placing it between the second Menuetto and the Adagio. However, strange though this procedure may be, it does not mar the general effect, and the set may be given high recommendation.

The HMV recording is excellent, as are the surfaces.

Mozart: Divertimento No. 11 in D major, K. 251, for Oboe, Two Horns and Strings. Berlin Chamber Orchestra conducted by Hans von Benda. Three 12" imported records (5 sides) in set DG-DGS4; price complete with album $8.93. (Automatic only).

Among Mozart's lighter music and occasional pieces the divertimenti have a high place. Many, not only because of structural similarities, but because of their inherent musical significance, take on the character of symphonies. But the fact remains, that they were intended as music for less formal occasion. The present Divertimento is composed in Mozart's "gallant" style, and dates from 1776. There are five movements: Allegro molto; Menuetto; Andantino; Menuetto con variazioni; Rondeau — Allegro assai.

The present performance is admirable throughout. There might have been a little more delicacy of shading in some of the string passages, but the general quality of playing is of a high order and the balance between strings and winds, excellent. The recording was made in a studio of the right proportions to emphasize the chamber aspects of the music. The surfaces are excellent.

Unfortunately, the final movement; "Marcia alla francese" is omitted. A more complete version is available in performance by the Dumbarton Oaks Festival Orchestra (MER-DM 4).

Mozart: Exsultate, jubilate, K. 165 (Motet). Elisabeth Schwarzkopf (soprano in Latin) and Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Walter Susskind, with George Thalben-Ball (organ). Two 12" imported records, Nos. C-LXII196/7; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

Here is a recording which may be given the highest praise. Mozart's motet, "Exsultate, jubilate" is essentially a miniature concerto for voice and orchestra, with its bright figuration in the first and last sections, and its long flowing melodic lines in the middle section. Elisabeth Schwarzkopf has a voice of beauty, exceptional vocal technique, and most important of all, genuine musicianship.

Her performance has both spirit and control. The balance between voice and orchestra is excellent, and the recording is tops. An exceptional Mozart release which is highly recommended. The last section of this motet, "Alleluja" has achieved considerable popularity by itself, but this is the only recording of the complete work which is available at the present time.

Mozart: Four "Milanese" Quartets (K. Anh. 210 to 213). Dessauer String Quartet. Four 12" imported records in set DG-DGS5; price complete with album $11.55. (Manual only).

Although attributed to Mozart, most authorities agree that the authenticity of the four String Quartets, K. Anh. 210 to 213, is doubtful. For in spite of many stylistic resemblances, there are many slight departures which are not found elsewhere in Mozart's output. Nevertheless, their inherent charm makes for delightful listening, and this first recording should find a welcome place in many libraries. They are usually listed as follows: No. 1 in A major, K. Anh. 212; No. 2 in B flat major, K. Anh. 210; No. 3 in C major, K. Anh. 211; No. 4 in E flat major, K. Anh. 213.

The Dessauer String Quartet performs these miniature quartets with grace and excellent ensemble work, and the recording is very satisfactory.

Mozart: Sonata No. 16 in B flat major, K. 570. Artur Schnabel (piano). Two 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB6839/40; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

It is well that a new recording of this sonata is available at last, for the earlier recording by Walter Gieseking (CMX-79) was made several years ago, and shows its age to a marked degree. In addition, Gieseking tended to be a little glib in his performance, although his tonal balance was sometimes more suitable than Schnabel's. But on the whole, the present version is marked by sensitive, nicely proportioned playing. The recording is excellent.

Mozart: Trio No. 5 in B flat major, K. 502, for Piano, Violin and 'Cello, Trio di Trieste. Three 12" imported records, Nos. G-AW326/8; price, $7.86. (Manual only).

Mozart's Trio No. 5 in B flat major dates from 1786, the same year in which the "Prague" Symphony and the opera, "Le Nozze di Figaro" were produced. With these works it stands as a serene example of Mozart's mature genius. The composition is effortlessly smooth throughout, and although the mood is generally light and free, there are occasional overtones of more serious meaning. There are three movements: Allegro; Larghetto; Allegretto. One of the finest examples of Mozart's chamber music.

The performance by the Trio di Trieste is smoothly integrated, both technically and interpretively. Both the recording and the Italian pressings are good.

Paisiello: Concerto for Piano and Orchestra (Trans. Lualdi). Riccardo Castagnone (piano) with Chamber Orchestra of the Royal Conservatory, San Pietro a Majella, Naples, conducted by A. Lualdi. Two 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB11312/3; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

The eighteenth century Italian composer, Giovanni Paisiello, is best known for his operas, many of which were among the most popular stage works of his day. What is not generally known is the fact that he was also the composer of twelve symphonies and six piano concerti. The present concerto is not identified on the record label, but it is a light-textured work, resembling in some respects Mozart. But if Mozart served as a basis for the outward form of the work, Scarlatti and other Italian keyboard composers were Paisiello's spiritual predecessors. The concerto is in three movements: Allegro; Larghetto; Allegro.

The performance is nicely managed throughout, but the balance between piano and orchestra might have been a little better in spots. Otherwise there is no serious criticism. The recording is good, as are the Italian surfaces.

Paisiello: Proserpina—Ballet Music (Arr. Lualdi). Chamber Orchestra of the Royal Conservatory of San Pietro a Majella, Naples, conducted by A. Lualdi. Two 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB15357/8; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

The ballet music contains the following sections: Nei giardini di Cerere; Sarabanda; Il corteo di Plutone e delle Divinità infernali; Marcia; Zefiro — Danza — Giga; Sotto gli alberi in fiore — Passapiede delle Ninfe; Minuetto della Regina Proserpina; Romanza; La raggiunta felicità; Tamburino.

The performance of this pleasant ballet suite is very fine and the recording good.

Prokofiev: Sonata No. 1 for Violin and Piano, Op. 80. Yehudi Menuhin (violin) and Marcel Gazzelle (piano). Three 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB9376/8; price, $7.86. (Automatic only).

Prokofiev's first Violin Sonata was composed between 1938 and 1946, and was published for the first time in 1947. It is a dynamic work, marked by strong contrasts between quiet, thoughtful lyricism, and vigorous — almost brutal — rhythmic passages. It is in four movements: Andante assai; Allegro brusco; Andante; Allegrissimo — Andante assai, come prima. A first hearing will bear out the beauty of the quiet lyrical passages, but the more forceful sections may take several listenings. At any rate, it is a work of solid worth and great beauty.

Menuhin is at his best in this performance. His particular genius is well fitted for modern works of art, for he has an almost instinctive ability to get a sense of perspective on new music, a quality which usually comes to an artist only after long familiarity with the particular work. Marcel Gazzelle provides particularly fine ensemble work, while HMV's recording is not the least virtue of this exceptional release.

Ravel: Shéhérazade — Song Cycle. Maggie Teyte (Soprano) with Royal Opera House Orchestra, Covent Garden, conducted by Hugo Rignold. Two 12" imported records, Nos. G-DB6843/4; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

Ravel's youthful cycle, "Shéhérazade" is an exotic work, based on the highly colored poems of his friend, Tristan Klingsor. While characteristic of Ravel's later style in regard to instrumentation and vocal demands, the cycle has a more personal, introspective approach than is usually found in the later works. The three songs are entitled: Asie; La Flûte enchantée; L'indifférent.

Although the balance between voice and orchestra might have been a little smoother in the first of the songs, it is beautifully done. The last two songs, however, are magnificent. The balance, not only between voice and orchestra, but within the orchestra itself, is perfect. Miss Teyte's vocal technique sounds as effortless as in her earlier recordings, and the recording is excellent. In spite of the minor reservations which might be made in regard to technical details in the first song, this set is likely to be definitive from an interpretive point of view.

Reger: Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Mozart, Op. 132. Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, conducted by Eduard van Beinum. Five 12" imported records in set DG-DGS2; price complete with album $14.18. (Automatic only).

Max Reger, known for years as either a "musician's musician" or as a lesser shadow of Brahms, is one of the most neglected composers of the late nineteenth century. Like Brahms, a master of his craft, he was a romantic who followed in the classic traditions. Both Brahms and Reger were considered dry and pedantic by the ardent followers of Wagnerianism, but just as Brahms has been reconsidered and accepted as one of the finest of the romantics, it is to be hoped that Reger will also be re-evaluated.

Taking the gentle theme from the first movement of Mozart's A major Piano Sonata, K. 331, Reger weaves eight beautiful variations and a fugue. While the construction is always of the highest skill, it is never an end in itself. One or two listenings to this music should convince the average listener that Reger is anything but pedantic.

Eduard van Beinum's interpretation of this score tends to be a little restrained, but on the whole, the performance is admirable, warm, and yet clear in structural outline. The Deutsche Grammophon recording is excellent.

An earlier recording by the Saxon State Orchestra conducted by Karl Böhm is not available at present.

Respighi: Feste Romane (Roman Festivals). Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Victor de Sabata. Four 12" imported records (7 sides) in set DG-DGS3; price complete with album $11.55. (Automatic only).

As is the case with Ravel, Respighi is usually considered an impressionist, although the primary aim of both composers was the perfection of cohesive formal structures — a point which is almost completely alien to pure impressionism.

Nevertheless, the essentials of their harmonic technique and their fondness for orchestral color, has as its basis, impressionism. This is particularly true of Respighi's first symphonic poem, "The Fountains of Rome". In the second of his tone poems about Rome, "The Pines of Rome", Respighi began to write in a more angular fashion, and in the present work, the divorce from impressionism becomes virtually complete. The sections of this work are: Circus Maximus; The Jubilee; October Harvest Festivals; The Epiphany.

De Sabata offers a highly imaginative performance of this colorful tone poem. The performance, together with the excellent Deutsche Grammophon recording, surpasses the fine version done by Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra a few months ago (CMM-707).

Rossini: Quartet in F major for Flute, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon. Niedermayer (flute), Wlach (clarinet), Freiberg (horn), and Ohleberger (bassoon). Two 10" imported records, Nos. GDA4483/4; price, $4.00. (Manual only).

It is not generally known that the composer of "The Barber of Seville" and "William Tell" also wrote five string quartets and a quartet for woodwinds. The latter was first published in 1929. Although essentially slight, it is nevertheless pleasant music with a lightness and humor that brings to mind Haydn. The work is in three movements: Allegro; Andante; Finale.

The soloists in the present performance are all members of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. With effortless technique and excellent ensemble work, they give this little novelty a very smooth performance. The recording is nicely balanced and the Italian pressings are good.

Schubert: Quintet in A major, Op. 114 ("Trout"). Franz Rupp (piano), with the Stross Quartet: Wilhelm Stross (violin), Valentin Härtl (viola), Anton Walter ('cello), and Ludwig Jaeger (bass). Four 12" records in set CT-EDL8019; price complete with album $6.55. (Automatic only).

Schubert: Quintet in A major, Op. 114 ("Trout"). The London Belgian Piano Quartet: Maurice Raskin (violin), Leonard Ardenois (viola), Rodolphe Soiron ('cello), and Marcel Gazelle (piano), with Herbert Lodge (bass). Four 12" imported records, Nos. ED-AK1366/9; price, $8.40. (Automatic only).

Schubert's joyous Quintet in A major is one of the most popular pieces of all chamber music. The title, "The Trout" stems from the use of the song, "Die Forelle", as the theme for a series of variations in the fourth movement. The movements are marked: Allegro vivace; Andante; Scherzo; Theme and Variations; Allegro giusto.

Of the two performances, the Stross Quartet, with Franz Rupp, offers the more interesting presentation of this delightful work. Their attacks throughout are more incisive, the accents more clearly defined, and the phrasing, smoother. In addition, the ensemble is much better balanced. The performance by the London Belgian Piano Quartet is acceptable, if not particularly distinguished.

Both recordings were made a few years ago. Of the two, the Capitol-Telefunken is the more lifelike.

DICTION RECORDS

Chaucer: The Prologue to the Canterbury Tales—Excerpts. Nevill Coghill and Cecil Trouncer (readers). Two 12" imported records, Nos. CDX1572/3; price, $5.24. (Manual only).

On the first side of this set, Nevill Coghill reads "The Prologue" and "The Wyf of Bath" in Chaucerian English. The remaining three sides are devoted to Cecil Trouncer's reading of the following sections in modern English: The Prologue; The Knight; Squire; Prioress; Clerk; Franklin; Ship's Captain; End of Prologue. Both readers possess a clarity of diction which is a pleasure to hear. This set should find a wide audience, not only among students, but with the general record collector as well.

A Chant From The Bhagavad Gita. Dr. T. M. P. Mahadevan (reader, in Sanskrit), and Swami Nikhilananda (reader, in English). 12" unbreakable record, No. EFL-1045; price complete with texts and notes $5.00.

On one side, Dr. Mahadevan chants the verses from the second chapter of the Gita which describes the nature of the perfect man. It is read in the original Sanskrit, and delivered in the traditional manner. The reverse side contains the English translation which is read by Swami Nikhilananda. A diction record of unusual interest.
